Library Orientation	"How to Access Library Resources through OPAC"
Venue	Library
Organized by	Librarian, Dr. D Y Patil School of Management
Targeted Audience	Students

Agenda:

- Give Training to the Students of "How to Access Library Resources through OPAC"
- To train to Search SIP report details as per Student Name, Guide Name, Subject, Company Name and Accession Number of the same.
- To train to Search the E Books and E Journals from the Databases and how to download full text or specific chapter of the same.
- To Train to search the Book catalogue of the library as per Author, Title, Publisher, Specific Subject and the accession Number of the book.

Purpose:

The orientation program helps library users feel confident in using library resources, supports academic success, and ensures that they are aware of all the tools and services the library offers.

It aims to enhance their academic experience by making them more comfortable with using the library as a tool for learning and research.

Outcome of the Training:

Familiarity with Resources: Students learned how to access a wide range of resources (books, journals, articles, databases, and multimedia materials), which helps them find reliable information for their coursework, research projects, and papers.

Effective Search Techniques: The program teaches students how to use the library catalog, databases, and other tools effectively, saving them time and improving the quality of their research.

Remote Access: Orientation often includes information on how to access library resources from home or off-campus, ensuring that students can work from anywhere, anytime.

Library as a Learning Resource: The program helps students view the library not just as a place to check out books but as a valuable learning resource throughout their academic journey.

Research Independence: By teaching students how to access and use academic resources, the library fosters independent learning and research skills, which will serve students in future academic and professional endeavors.
